

The Scientific Exploration Society

DISCLAIMER

Individuals participate at their own risk in any expedition supported by the Scientific Exploration Society ("SES"). SES cannot be held responsible for any mishap to such individuals. SES cannot take responsibility for the consequences of strikes, war, sickness, quarantine, government action or other 'force majeure' circumstances on any expedition which SES may support. Expeditions supported by SES involve exposure to accepted elements of risk, challenge and adventure greater than those normally encountered in everyday life. Expeditions supported by SES often take place in remote areas where medical or rescue facilities may not be immediately available. Individuals on an expedition supported by SES accept they are prepared to accept such circumstances. Such individuals will not hold SES, its trustees, employees, volunteers partners or agents liable for any loss, damage, personal injury, delay or expense suffered or incurred by them. Those on an expedition supported by SES acknowledge that they are responsible for making themselves aware, through UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office advice warnings and any other sources available to them, in regard to the safety of the countries and areas in which they may be travelling and to make their decisions accordingly. The SES expect the individual to have obtained all necessary consents prior to an Expedition, maintain in force during the period that the SES is supporting an Expedition adequate insurance cover with reputable insurers, and ensure that the Expedition is conducted ethically and responsibly at all times. Nothing in this disclaimer shall limit or exclude SES's liability for death or personal injury caused by its negligence.
